Overall observations and comments made by the reviewer:

- User says the pages look good
- User is clicking on every thing that looks clickable
- User testing to see if the website is slow at loading
- When user clicks on next or prev on the product page they say its a little iffy but overall doesnt affect it too much
- User says the website looks pretty clean
- Need to add color some how, feels like theres not enough but its good as is
- Unsure of what the original price is for products on sale
- Should have the original price beside the sale to show the discount
- No indication on what page youre on, should add some sort of header to show that or its highlighted
- Asks if a search function should be added
- Maybe a support page, like if someone had issues they have somewhere to navigate to
- Add a home page, it could have like deals or so, just general things

I asked my friend to do a review of our website so far, overall he said that it looks pretty promising with nice features and nice layout, though some things we could add to make it better for the user to use. Though we can always add them in the future if we have the knowledge to do so, to conclude he had some good ideas and good points made about our website and can use this information to further enhance the user experience.

Changes we are making according to this review:

We plan on adding potentially some color accents, small details of colour that wouldnt drastically change the look of the website. We can add a contact page (wont do anything just a place holder), we are also thinking of adding the original price to compare with the sale price for better understanding of the price. Lastly we will add some sort of indication on what page you are on since the user can get confused where there are on the website.
